Description:

HackOverflow-2K23, a college-level hackathon conducted by SRKR Coding Club under the Training and Placement Cell of SRKR Engineering College, in association with the Department of CSE, transcends traditional coding competitions.

Students from diverse disciplines showcased their coding skills, collaborated with like-minded individuals, and contributed to innovative solutions. The event witnessed an impressive turnout, with enthusiastic participation from 1st-year students who added a vibrant energy to the hackathon.

All participants, regardless of the branch or year, received well-deserved participation certificates in acknowledgment of their dedication and valuable contributions. In a special effort to encourage 1st-year participants, consolidation prizes were awarded. Additionally, the top-performing teams, those securing the first, second, and third places, were recognized with prizes, celebrating their outstanding achievements and innovative solutions.

HackOverflow-2K23 exemplifies the commitment of SRKR Coding Club to providing a diverse and inclusive platform that not only challenges participants but also celebrates their accomplishments across disciplines.
